June 27th, 1917.

Darling Frances:-

Couldn't help it, but had to write. Felt awfully lonesome + blue last night after I left so made up my mind to write to you the first thing in the morning.

Mom was tickled over the announcement cards, but can't understand why you went to such an expense. She said the card was the prettiest she had ever seen, but my father ~~kno~~ got kind of sore at me because I didn't bring home any cards.

Well, Toots mine, how are you feeling? Tired?

Hope not. How did you find your uncle?

I'm going on another hike to-day. Didn't get my gun as I thought I would.

Haven't time to write more, so will close with all my love to my sweetheart Toots,

Lovingly,

Joe.
